"Some of the equipment required for development of products are very expensive and startup companies may not be able to buy them. They can rent them at the incubation centres," Kharge said.

In Bengaluru, the incubation centre will come up at the state-owned Keonics complex at HSR Layout.

"In other places we are looking for complexes owned by the government or we will take them on rent to set up the centres," the minister said.

The number of companies that have registered with the state government's startup cell has increased from 27 around four months ago to 2,357 till date. Startups that enrol with the 'booster kit' of the cell get access to software tools, mentors, legal and accounting consultants besides state funds.

Kharge said his department will now make "Startup Open House" a monthly affair wherein the minister and department officials will interact with company representatives.
